BASELINE ASSESSMENT OF R2P IMPLEMENTATION

Asia-Pacific Centre for the Responsibility to Protect r2pasiapacific.org  r2pinfo@uq.edu.au

The following Baseline Assessment Annex provides an overview of the Republic of Korea’s efforts in implementing R2P as of 2019. For a full description of the methodology used in this study, see Part II of ‘Implementing the Responsibility to Protect in the Asia Pacific: An Assessment of Progress and Challenges’, available here.
The Republic of Korea (ROK or South Korea) has performed strongly in implementing R2P.

The ROK performs strongest in terms of the implementation of existing international legal instruments, domestic implementation, and support for multilateral endeavours. It was the first East Asian state to appoint a national R2P Focal Point, has ratified all twelve key international legal instruments considered most relevant to R2P, ensures equal access to judicial institutions and has very strong domestic laws protecting human rights, eliminating discrimination, and protecting vulnerable segments of society (particularly in relation to sexual and gender-based violence). Its robust and diverse civil society is amongst the most vibrant in the region, successive government have ensured fair and equal access to judicial institutions, and civilian authorities maintain effective control over the security sector.

The ROK is amongst the strongest performers on the international dimensions of R2P as well, though many of its programs (for example refugee resettlement) are focused almost exclusively on problems associated with North Korea. Indeed, the ROK has highly restrictive asylum policies and in 2018 it refused to grant refugee status to 500 Yemenis seeking sanctuary from atrocity crimes in their own country. It has participated in and delivered official statements at all the UN General Assembly dialogues and debates on R2P and is one of the few Asian states that are members of the Group of Friends of R2P. It hosted the 2017 meeting of the R2P Focal Points Network. Additionally, the ROK has actively sought to further the R2P agenda at the United Nations. During its tenure as a member of the Security Council (2013-14) it chaired a High-Level Debate on the protection of civilians in armed conflict and cosponsored Resolution S/RES/2150 on ‘Threats to International Peace and Security - prevention of genocide’. Lastly, the ROK has been a key actor in supporting human protection in North Korea, for example hosting the Seoul office of the OHCHR, which focuses on the human rights situation under the Kim regime. It has also invested in promoting multilateral cooperation, trust and peace in Northeast Asia through the Northeast Asia Peace and Cooperation Initiative (NAPCI).

Despite the resource constraints placed on the ROK due to the ongoing military tensions with the DPRK, the country has made small but important contributions to United Nations Peacekeeping operations that have a protection of civilians mandate and has been a generous financial contributor to UN peacekeeping. The Korea International Cooperation Agency conducts training programs for various human rights issues, including capacity building for diplomats with a special emphasis on R2P. However, whilst the state has good national provisions for peacekeeping training, there is limited explicit engagement with atrocity prevention and the ROK is not yet a signatory to the Kigali Principles.

Republic of Korea Score: 74

The Republic of Korea was an early supporter of R2P and today stands as one of the Asia Pacific’s principal supporters of the norm. It was the first East Asian state to appoint a Focal Point, has been an active participant in international and regional discussions on R2P, and has consistently demonstrated its support for all aspects of R2P and its implementation. Internationally, it tends to prioritise the situation in the DPRK.

The Act also mandates the creation of an Advisory Committee for the Promotion of Human Rights in North Korea to advise the government of the ROK on the creation of a Basic Plan for the Promotion of Human Rights in North Korea and the establishment of the Centre for North Korean Human Rights Records.

Additionally, the ROK has undertaken further actions to address human rights abuses in the DPRK, such as:

- Appointing an Ambassador-at-Large on North Korean human rights;
- Discussions with the UN Human Rights Council’s Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the DPRK;
- Awareness raising and calls to action through speeches at the UN General Assembly and Security Council, and developing regional strategies for enhancing peace and security such as the Trust-Building Process on the Korean Peninsula.

sign and ratify the Rome statute of the International Criminal Court and cooperate fully with the Court.

Establish and maintain National Human Rights Institutions in accordance with the Paris Principles.

Ensure domestic promotion and protection of human rights, focusing on the elimination of discrimination.

| Of the wider eighteen core IHRLs, the ROK is a state party to eleven. | The ROK is also a state party to the Chemical Weapons Convention, Biological Weapons Convention, the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty and the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty. It has also ratified the Convention Against Discrimination in Education and the Convention relating to the Status of Stateless Persons.

The ROK retains the death penalty, although it is currently a de-facto abolitionist state.

Sign and ratify the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court and cooperate fully with the Court.

Establish and maintain National Human Rights Institutions in accordance with the Paris Principles.

Ensure domestic promotion and protection of human rights, focusing on the elimination of discrimination.

| The Republic of Korea ratified the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court in 2002. | Under the National Human Rights Commission Act, the ROK created the National Human Rights Commission (NHRCK) with a mandate to “…ensure that inviolable fundamental human rights of all individuals are protected and the standards of human rights are improved.” It retains a top “A” rating after its latest review.

The Constitution of the Republic of Korea grants all international laws and treaties signed by the ROK the same status as Korean domestic law.

The constitution also declares that “All citizens shall be assured of human dignity and worth and have the right to pursue happiness. It shall be the duty of the State to confirm and guarantee the fundamental and inviolable human rights of individuals.” The constitution further guarantees that “All citizens shall be equal before the law, and there shall be no discrimination in political, economic, social or cultural life on account of sex, religion or social status.”

The law also ensures that women enjoy the same legal rights as men, including equal pay for equal work.

The ROK has several domestic laws specifically designed to limit discrimination. These include:

Participate in international peer review processes, including the Universal Periodic Review (UPR) of the UN Human Rights Council. Very Strong

The ROK has participated numerous times in the UPR.31

- In 2008, ROK participated in its first UPR. Out of a total of 33 recommendations, the State accepted 15, another two pended responses and the further 16 were commented upon but were given no clear position. None were rejected.32
- At its second UPR in 2012, ROK accepted 42 out of 70 recommendations, 27 were commented upon and one more had a response pending.33
- At its third UPR in 2017, ROK supported 121 recommendations out of the 218 it received and noted the further 97.34

The ROK has also actively participated in wider peer review processes, including country visits of UN mandate holders and Special Procedures, to which they have extended a Standing Invitation.36

Ensure equal access to justice. Very Strong

Article 11(1) of the constitution guarantees equal access to judicial institutions, and various other Articles ensure the presumption of innocence and the right to a speedy and fair trial (Articles 27(1), 27(3), 27(4) and Art. 28). The US Department of State’s 2016 Human Rights report stressed that the Republic of Korea has an independent and impartial judiciary.

Criminalise incitement to commit genocide, war crimes, ethnic cleansing and crimes against humanity. Strong Instigation of genocide or genocidal acts has been criminalised under Article 8 of the Act on Punishment etc. of Crimes under Jurisdiction of the International Criminal Court. Under Article 13 of the same Act, the direction of soldiers by their military commanders to indiscriminately kill enemy combatants is also criminalised.

Take measures to counter and prevent violent extremism. Strong

In 2018, the Korean Ministry for Foreign Affairs hosted the Inter-Regional Conference on Preventing and Countering Violent Extremism and Radicalization that Lead to Terrorism in collaboration with the OSCE Transnational Threats Department. Over the years the ROK has recognised the threat of international terrorism and violent extremism, and Korean nationals have been targeted for their support of US interventions in Afghanistan and Iraq, as well as their deployment to those regions. Continued state-sponsored terrorism from the DPRK against ROK remains a major concern.

Enact and implement laws protecting vulnerable groups, particularly in relation to sexual and gender-based violence. Strong

The ROK has numerous laws designed to protect vulnerable groups, including in relation to sexual and gender-based violence. These include:

- The Act on the Prevention of Domestic Violence and Protection, etc. of Victims aims to “prevent domestic violence and to protect and support victims thereof”.
- The Sexual Violence Prevention and Victims Protection Act, which aims to “contribute to the promotion of human rights by preventing sexual violence and by providing for means to protect and assist victims of sexual violence”.\(^{46}\)

- The Framework Act on Gender Equality states that “State and local governments shall prevent crimes of sexual violence, domestic violence, and sex trafficking as well as sexual harassment and protect victims” (Article 30), and that education must be provided to prevent sexual violence, domestic violence and sex trafficking (Article 31).\(^{47}\)

- The North Korean Refugees Protection and Settlement Support Act provides for “…matters relating to protection and support as are necessary to help North Korean residents escaping from the area north of the Military Demarcation Line”.\(^{48}\)

- The Act on the Protection of Children and Juveniles against Sexual Abuse addresses punishment for the commission of sex offences, assistance for children and juvenile victims of offences, and manages sex offenders.\(^{49}\)

- The Act on Livelihood Stability and Memorial Services, etc. for Sexual Slavery Victims for the Japanese Imperial Army, which is designed to “…protect and support victims who were mobilized compulsorily and forced to work as sexual slaves under the Japanese colonial rule.”\(^{50}\)

Legislation criminalizes rape and domestic violence and the police are said to generally respond promptly and appropriately to reported incidents, whilst the judicial system effectively enforces the law.\(^{51}\)

The ROK has also adopted a National Action Plan for the Implementation of United Nations Security Council Resolution 1325 on Women, Peace and Security.

Support atrocity prevention through development and assistance partnerships. | Fair | Little information has been found on partnerships for explicit technical assistance in the realm of atrocity prevention or response. However, there are wider relevant partnerships of note. The NHRCK is a member of the Asia-Pacific Forum and has been involved with various workshops and conventions. For example:

- In 2016, the NHRCK developed an Index on Identification and Protection of Human Trafficking Victims to help Korea meet international standards on human trafficking; 89
- The NHRCK hosted the Asian NGOs Network on National Human Rights Institutions (ANNI) meeting in 2017; 91

| Contribute to United Nations peacekeeping operations (especially those with a protection of civilians mandate). | Fair | As of September 2017, the ROK has contributed peacekeepers to six missions, two of which had a protection of civilians mandate (UNMIS and UNAMID). Previously, it has also contributed a small number of police, troops and/or military observers to Sudan (UNMIS) and Côte d’Ivoire (UNOCI).

Under Article 60, Section 2 of the constitution, the National Assembly has the right to dispatch armed forces to foreign states and in 2009 the Assembly passed the United Nations Peacekeeping Operations Participation Act. Under this Act, the government can make provisional agreements to deploy up to 1000 peacekeepers in non-combat roles without approval from the National Assembly, to rapidly respond to peacekeeping requests from the UN.

The principal barrier to contributing further to UN peacekeeping is the ongoing military confrontation on the Korean peninsula. North Korean violations of the armistice force the Korean government to retain a strong military presence at home, which limits its ability to deploy significant numbers of troops overseas.

In 2015, the ROK was the twelfth-highest financial contributor to UN peacekeeping.

Develop the capacities needed to support civilian protection, including through the training of military and civilian personnel for peacekeeping. | Fair | The Central Officials Training Institute conducts education on governance for central government officials from developing states as part of the UN Global Compact, and has committed to advancing human rights as a principle. However, it was delisted and expelled from the Compact as it did not communicate its progress.

KOICA conducts training programs for various human rights issues and capacity building measures, including the CIAT fellowship program and DEEP initiatives.
